

MONDAY, JANUARY 31. 1743.

THE Instructions given by the Town of Dord to their Deputies, have not made more Noise in Holland than they have done here; and the Reason is pretty evident, because Instructions, and Instructions of such a Nature, are particularly the Mode amongst some People. To oblige them therefore, it is not possible that, some time or other, we may publish the celebrated Instructions. It is true, they may seem to come a little out of Time, especially now, since they are lost their Effect; but no Matter for that, a good Edict is never out of Date. There are many smart things in those Instructions, which, by having a proper Turn given them, and being dress'd to the best Advantage in sounding Epithets, and swelling Hyperboles, afford a grand Air of Authority to the next Representation.

At present, since the Winds deny us a Dutch Mail, we can be no great Harm in talking a little of Dutch Affairs. It has been often doubted by First-rate Politicians, whether that Slowness, which, from the Nature of their Constitution attends Dutch Councils, be an Advantage or an Inconvenience. In some Cases it is certain that those who were the best Judges of this Point, determin'd it to be a Prejudice to the State, and at the Hazard of their Heads, as in the Affair of 1688, when Sir William Temple negotiated with them a famous tripple Alliance, which he engaged the States General to sign, without having recourse to the usual Manner. In some other Conjunctions, I must confess sticking to these Forms may have given the Turn of Scale to the States General, and enabled them to reap the Advantage of Events that fell out in the Interval. So that on the whole it may be averr'd, that it is one of Sir Roger de Coverly's Points, on which may be said on both Sides.

There is an Inconvenience attending the Prerogative which certain Towns have, and I think they are less than Fifty-six in Number, of putting a Negative on the Resolutions of the States, and that is the giving them Powers an Opportunity of intriguing with the Towns, and thereby clothing private Interest with Garb of Patriotism. This all who have written on the subject of Dutch Politicks have very readily admitted, yet I doubt it is an Inconvenience that scarce any of them have taken it into their Heads to possess the Minds of the People with causeless Jealousies, and groundless they find so many Topicks to descant upon, and hard their Discourses with so many Breathings of sick Spirit, that it is as difficult to discover a State, to expose a Religious Hypocrisy; and yet this has sometimes done, even in Holland itself, and the not unmask'd, has appear'd to be a downright French manner.

During the War that was carried on by the Confederates against France, immediately after the Revolution there was one Simon Van Halewijn, Burgo Master of Dord, who set up for the greatest Patriot in Holland, who had the Honour to be admir'd as such for many years together. It is true, that many who were then assist'd with Poets in the Government, long suspected his Aversion to Taxes, his Dread of Publick War, his warm Zeal for Peace, and all the other Teflings he gave of his Concern for his Country, had at Bottom some less noble Motive, and at last, with Industry and Difficulty, the Thing was traced out, and appear'd to the Publick in the following Light.

He went into Switzerland under Colour of attending private Affairs, and there he enter'd into a Correspondence with M. Amelot, the French King's Minister, the Terms on which a Peace might be made with the Confederates, tho' he had no Authority either from his superiors, or from any Prince in the Confederacy, to enter into such Conferences. At last he thought fit to propound what to him appear'd fit Terms for a general Peace, and undertook, that if Lewis XIV. would comply with these, he would propound them to the Majesty of the City of Dord, and engage them to propose to the States General.

In consequence of this Negotiation, one Du Plessis was sent from the Court of France, with no other Credentials than certain private Tokens of Confidence sent between the Burgo Master and French Minister, brought to Halewijn an Answer from Lewis XIV. in which he propos'd he had made; and to make the Affair go on the better, there was a Letter written by a Member of the Court of France to Du Plessis, dated the 4th of March, 1693, wherein he was empower'd to promise, in the French King's Name, a Present to the Sieur Van Halewijn of 20,000 Crowns, if he would prevail with the City of Dord to give such an Example to the other Cities of the United Provinces, that a general Peace might ensue.

But as Patriots are not always lucky in their French Correspondencies, it so fell out, that this Letter was intercepted, and was produced to the States General, who thereupon directed a Prosecution against this Gentleman, according to the Forms of that Country, and the necessary Proofs appearing in the strongest Light, on the 31st of July, 1693, Sentence was pronounced upon Simon Van Halewijn, Burgo Master senior of Dord, to be imprison'd during Life, and to have his Goods and Estate confiscated for the Use of the supreme Magistracy. And may the same Fate attend the Creatures of that all-corrupting Court in that, and every other Country!

Since our last arrived a Mail from France.

THE Elements of ALGEBRA, in 2 New and Easy Methods, with their Use and Application, in the Solution of a great Variety of Arithmetical and Geometrical Questions, by General and Universal Rules.
To which is prefix'd, An Introduction containing a succinct History of this Science.

By Mr. NATHANIEL HAMMOND, of the Bank.
Extract from the Account of this Book in the Works of the Learned.

'The World has long complained of the Want of a proper Introduction to Algebra. Some are so very concise, as they were contriv'd not to teach but introduce a Teacher; others again are larger, but wrote with so little Consideration to the Understandings of such as are altogether unacquainted with the Science, that they are of very little Use to those who are most inclined to make use of them. When it comes to pass, that few find it practicable to make any Progress in Algebra without a Master, tho' certainly the Science in itself is far from surpassing a clear Head, and a tolerable Understanding.

'The Design of this Treatise, which is of a reasonable Bulk and which contains nothing which is not solid, and to the Purpose, is to assist such as are engaged in teaching Algebra with a regular Method, and a large Stock of Examples; so that their Scholars may find Employment in their Absence and to enable such as live in Country-Places, and must consequently want all other Tutors, except Books, to acquire such a Skill in this Science, as may enable them to spend Portion of their Time agreeably in the Cultivation of the better Parts, and in rendering a natural Method of enquiring after Truth habitual.

'The Treatise begins with a copious Explanation of the Fundamental Principles of the Art, and of the Signs and Method of Notation used therein. The Author then proceeds to the several Rules, explaining them carefully and copiously in all their various Cases; so that with a moderate Attention it is simply impossible for a Person, who desires to be Master of Algebra, to miss of his End.

'We never find this Writer advancing any thing out of proper Place, or burthening the Mind of his Scholar with Rules, before they become necessary: He professes to have imitated the judicious Euclid in this Respect; and he has done it with equal Art and Felicity. By this means he has delivered the young Student in Algebra from that which usually the most fatiguing Part of the Science, viz. The Doctrine of Surds, in the Manner in which it is usually taught. By the same Means he leads his Reader directly to Equations; and, by shewing him the Profit he will receive from this Science, encourages him to overcome all its Difficulties. But having thus laid a strong and rational Foundation, he moves more slowly through the rest of his Work that whoever follows him, may be obliged to become Master of ever Branch of the Art, so as to be a compleat Algebraist before he quits his Book, and not a Smatterer.

'Quadratic Equations, and the Art of managing Converging Series, the admirable Invention of the incomparable Newton, are here so clearly explained, and their several Cases so plainly set down, and so thoroughly explicated, that may be truly said, there are no where else such Instructions to be met with. At the Close of the Book, we find abundantly of Observations, necessary for enlightening such Minds as are willing to proceed still farther in analytic Discoveries; so that considering the Compass of this Work, and that it is very moderate, it is as complete as possibly can be expected: And he who is thoroughly versed in it, will find no great Difficulties, when he proceeds to sublimer Studies. The Language is plain and natural, the Book is more copious than any other in Examples, and the Illustrations of the are so full and clear, that it is impossible to mistake the Meaning.
